There are more than 35 species of Lavender, producing in excess of 300 cultivars. They come from southern Europe, northern Africa, the Middle East and the central Atlantic Islands. They are all fairly similar; requiring full sun, well drained soil, all with the characteristic lipped flowers and most are strongly aromatic. The sad fact is that most commercial growers only have a few of the oil producers and at most a couple of the ornamental forms. Larkman Nurseries haven't confined themselves to this narrow band of plants. In fact they have one of the largest ranges of lavender in the world. We spend a lot of time and resources keeping abreast of what is happening around the world. We also have a strong commitment to nomenclature and accuracy in naming of plants. We have imported most of the commercially grown varieties in this country. As such you can be comfortable with the correctness of what we supply you. On this page are some of the more popularly grown varieties for Grade One Oil, Grade Two Oil and cut flower. Place your orders NOW for summer autumn delivery. Call Di on 03 9735 3831

STARTING A LAVENDER FARM?

Over the past few years a number of people have started up lavender enterprises. Many of them have used the services of Larkman Nurseries as either consultants or have bought Clive's booklet: "Lavenders: Turning A Hobby Into a Business" which includes phone consultations or an hour's meeting at Larkman Nurseries. Setting up any new business is an exciting but awesome task and it can be quite difficult to obtain the information needed to make the right decisions. Clive has set about learning all he can from Lavender farms in five countries with the view to being able to advise you, our customer in the areas of plant selection, site selection and preparation, planting and most other issues you will face.

Clive Larkman has a degree in Botany, is a certificated Nurseryman and has been actively involved in the Horticulture industry for over fourteen years. He is a long standing member of the Australian Lavender Growers Association and member of the Australian Lavender Industry Pty Ltd. He has a broad base of knowledge from the biochemistry of the lavender plants to the macroeconomic influences on the price of lavender oil in the world market.

Larkman Nurseries is a holder of the OPCA lavender collection and has one of the largest collections in the world. As well as lavender, we have a large collection of Rosemary and Salvia. We grow in excess of 2500 plant varieties and are able to advise on alternative plants for your business.

We are open 7:30am to 6:00pm Monday to Friday and other times by appointment – please ring prior to your visit so we can be available. You can also find us on the web at www.larkmannurseries.com.au
