Clive's Comments

Welcome to the new Financial Year which many are saying is going to be tough on small business. Not sure what this means for the nursery industry as we are supposed to be recession proof. We have all heard the old paradigms that when things are going well the less well off feel they can afford to spend money on plants and flowers for the house and garden. The better off travel more and spend money on more expensive needs. Sometimes this means renovations or even moving house which involves garden makeovers.

When times are less buoyant people travel less and are more likely to spend money in the garden during their staycations. Garden makeovers are more popular than major house renovations. Money spent in the garden makes people feel better with lower outgoings. Also many will try and save money by growing their own fruit and vegetables. Plants are still good value to the retail consumer and make inexpensive gifts. All reasons to keep people buying plants. The mix of size and range will change but sales are still there.

The bigger influence with economic fluctuations is on the commercial landscape sector as the larger companies are always aware of what is happening on a global scale. However many of the really large scale projects are committed years ahead and are far more weather dependent. Which is probably similar with the retail sector. A lovely fine weekend will tend to get people into the garden and then into the nurseries.....

.... A cold miserable one will have the media saying that we should be sitting in front of the fire and not venturing out of the house.

We are a complex yet simple industry with a wide range of factors that influence our sales. The worst times in the last forty years have been when we have had extended and severe droughts. This slows demand in all sectors and the fear of water restrictions is the major contributing factor. One plus is that over the years each time we have a restriction in water usage the home gardener realises they don't have to water as often as they think is needed.

Finally we also have the fashion side of the plant industry. I still remember the decade or so of pebbles and grasses where so many landscapers were focused on minimalistic design. Pebble garden beds, large rocks with grasses and strappy leaved plants were the must have. This slowed down the growers with all the really attractive garden plants – but only for a while! Late and post covid saw a huge rise in the trend for indoor and patio plants. It seemed there were some plants that could sell for almost any price. Those times have dropped off but indoor plants are back in the mix.

Whatever the pressure the variations between a good year and a slow year are not so large. It is still rare for nursery businesses having to dump large volumes of over grown stock. There are also many times when plants are in demand and as soon as they can be shipped they are out the door.

The spread of our retailer sector means the range of customers is large. This is a strength of our industry which means we can attract all types and ages of gardeners. The novice can buy less expensive plants from a large retailer whilst also enabling passionate and skilled gardeners to buy rare, mature or complex plants from specialist retailers. The large retailers keep the growers in a position to have large volumes of many plants around most of the year. They also allow new gardeners a chance to buy at a price where they aren't scared to lose the plants due to their inexperience. These folk will gradually fall in love with gardening and then start to move to higher price more unusual plants. They may even feel safe enough to buy items like espaliered fruit trees, large topiaries or rare plants from different climates.

We really are a good industry to live and work in. Sometimes July can make us feel a bit cold and slow (in southern Australia) but once the shortest day has passed the plants and animals remind us spring is close! It is not long and we are all busy as we can be and life rushes on to Christmas.

Clive Larkman

Do you want or need to import live plants?

If so, you may need to use a Post Entry Quarantine facility (PEQ)

- We have a PEQ facility with ability to handle the majority of plants
- Deflask tissue culture in PEQ or in regular nursery conditions
- Advise on packing and handling to minimise risk to plant health
- Assist in obtaining import permits
- Organise fumigation and insecticidal dips
- Will collect from airport
- Ship Australia wide once cleared PEQ (WA restrictions for new varieties may apply.)
- Pot on into larger pots post PEQ
- Bulk up stock post PEQ
- 30 years experience in plant importation
- 35 years experience in plant growing
- Handle one plant to several thousand.
- Fully licensed with Biosecurity and Border Control
