Clive's Comments

August is here and the weather is warming nicely. WA and Qld are already in full spring. Melbourne has had the coldest July for nearly ten years. We have plenty of water and gardeners are just itching to get out there planting, pruning and picking. We just need to get them in to the garden centres.

Edibles are still leading the list of plants being chased and are the reason our client base has dropped significantly in age. There are so many people who want more variety, better quality and healthier foods. There is a green grocer near us that has an amazing range of fruit, vegetables and herbs. He is always busy and on Saturday afternoon will have eight tills operating. He has three other stores and is planning two more. Many of his varieties are why people grow their own, unusual and tasty. Gardens are on the rise as a way of improving our lives. We can get our food in them and the kitchen dining areas in modern houses always encompass an outdoor eating/cooking area. Some of those new BBQs have more options than an average kitchen.

Garden clubs are getting younger people showing interest and there are a lot more

Continued from page 1. ... families and young couples attending garden shows. Kids are having fun growing their own vegetables and also like attractive and pretty flowers. As an industry we need to develop this love of the garden in the wider community.

One area that falls over in Australia is the rental sector. Europeans will look after their gardens whether they rent or own. Australians seem to have an attitude of not improving the garden as you are just benefiting the landlord. We have a rental property that had a great garden when we bought it as an investment. Ten years later it is just lawn with a couple of trees. Drive through any local suburb and the rental properties are easy to pick.

This is a sector that could do with some promotion. There is such a low base of renters that garden only a small lift would mean a large boost to plant sales. Start with food plants then work on the emotive benefits of having a beautiful garden. There are also a wide range of plants that have other uses in the home. Some make good pesticides for the house and garden, others can be used for natural soaps and cosmetics.

Indeed many of the plants we have grown for their looks are actually good food and medicinal plants. Artichokes are grown more for their appearance than their delicious buds. Grewia occidentalis has long been grown as a flowering shrub but it also has tasty berries that make an enjoyable drink. Aloysia triphylla has pretty white flowers and refreshing lemon or lime scented foliage. The leaves make great tea and also good margaritas

One problem we have are those councils that still feel they have a right to come and tell me what I can and cannot grow on my property. They need to stop making value judgements about indigenous and exotic plants. Personally any plant is better than concrete or plastic. A well chosen plant palette will give an attractive garden that yields food and drink products. It will add value to the property and help in fire retarding and summer cooling.

It is time to get plenty of stock on the ground. As one nurseryman said to me; 'if you haven't potted it you can't sell it'. Stock potted up in August will take off quickly as the days get longer and the nights stay warmer. Have a warm and busy August. Regards Clive Larkman.

Dymondia margaretae

$1.40— Tubes looking great NOW!

Makes a flat, very drought tolerant ground cover and good lawn replacement in dry zones. Takes heavy foot traffic. Plant en masse. Individual plants spread to around 1m.

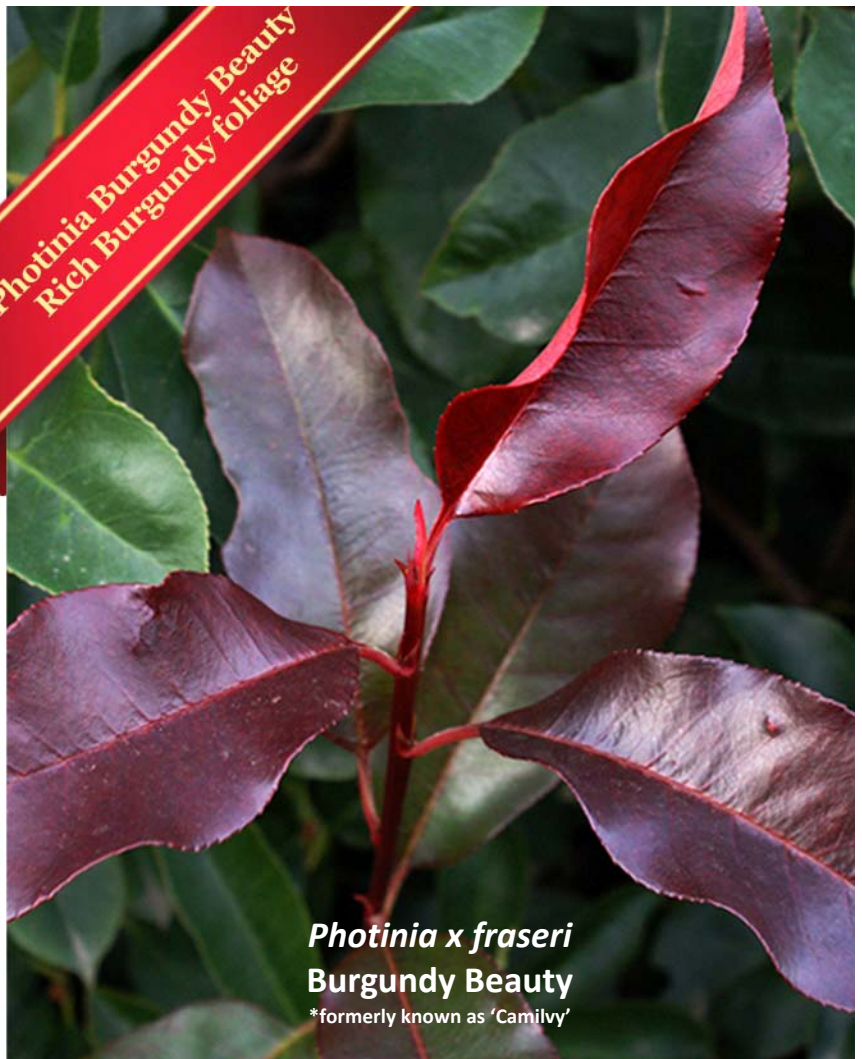

Dianthus ‘Candy Floss’

Tubes looking great NOW! $1.40

A beautifully fragrant selection, easy to grow and exceptionally hardy. A compact form with stunning scented double pink flowers which age to darker pink edges as the bloom matures.
