Clive's Comments

Spring is over and it was a slow start for SE Australia. In Melbourne it seemed to never get here then October came and the weather was great. Regular rain mixed with many sunny days. Good growing and gardening weather which translated into high sales. Everyone I spoke to has had a busy October and November which was needed after a hard winter and average autumn. Edibles again lead the charge but perennials are still popular and another interesting trend is in succulents and indoor plants. The former have been popular for a while due to their low water needs but now they have won favour with the younger folk. I recently had a younger person buying edibles for her business direct from the nursery. When she saw the succulents she became quite excited and kept referring to the different colours as 'really cool'. I enjoyed watching her pick all these interesting and attractive plants. It seems as she is not the only person as I have also seen lots of small shops selling them in weird and unusual pots etc. The other interesting shift is the popularity of indoor plants. When I first entered the industry there were dozens of specialist indoor plant growers doing a huge range of plants in pots sizes from small terrariums to large indoor tubs and hire companies with very few left now. We were recently approached about quarantining some Monstera from Italy. All sorts of new cultivars...

Since then I have had several phone calls from young nursery operators chasing variegated and compact forms. I was then speaking to another nursery operator who told me these plants are 'on trend' with millennials and they will pay good money. Same for other rare indoor plant cultivars. Somehow we have finally tapped into this huge sector of the community. I am sure that once they get the bug of growing their own plants they will soon move to edibles and other outdoor plants.

Anyway it is spring and Christmas is only a few weeks away. For most of Australia weather is on the move from spring to summer and already some hot days have slowed people down. Personally I am not fussed what the weather is I just work around it. I heard a good quote the other day: "There is no such thing as bad weather just poor clothing choices". It is likely we will have a hot summer but that is normal and we will all live through it. To me it is just the Australian Christmas and I can't wait for Christmas week. It is my favorite time of year: family, friends and fine food. What else do we need?

This year we have large family gathering at home and will spend plenty of time eating, in the pool and maybe even at some Christmas sales. The run up will involve getting the house and garden all cleaned up as will many other Australians making it a busy period between now and end of December. It is also good growing weather and so we need to be planning our potting for late summer/autumn sales. It is always a tussle between having plants on the ground that need watering and holding off potting until after the break and not having enough stock. January/February can be quite busy and if we don't have it on the ground we cannot sell it. Lost sales are never regained and can end up in lost customers. Let's get out there and get lots more plants into Australian gardens.

We always just make sure the stock is potted up and work to hold over the Christmas New Year period with the anticipation of business being good in late summer. Although we will have our usual heat there is still plenty of water in the subsoil. Plants are able to keep growing with not too much additional water. This is good for the gardens but also means we are still a way of the peak fire risk of 2009.

Di, Martin (& Chie and Asa), Simon (& Gemma, Tyra, Ollie and Ebony) and myself would like to wish you and your families a very happy Christmas and prosperous New Year. Enjoy your time with family and friends and remember this is one time when we some excess is okay!
