NEW RELEASE!

Geranium 'Intense'
Clive's Comments

As usual the year rolls on. Seems like Christmas was a few weeks ago. May is here and winter is around the corner. Of course Australia is a huge country so winter is so different across the states and even with some states. As you would expect we tend to focus on what happens in the southern states where it is cold and somewhat wet (hopefully) which slows down the retail market and can make the landscape sector tricky. Our winter is really quite mild by world standards with most major cities (even in the south) rarely getting below zero. Even our coldest parts don't have long term snow cover and will generally have some warmer days. There is the constant battle between needing the rain for the agriculture sector, for the home gardener and to avoid water restrictions and the other side where we want sunny warm days so that the plants will grow and the people can garden. Then also a cold winter helps slow down pests and diseases and a warm one adds to them. Talk to some Canadian nursery men where winter means many days with a top temperature below zero and we always feel a bit better. I remember visiting European nurseries that turn into retail shops selling almost everything but plants. Many have great Christmas displays and other do indoor furniture and others jewellery and handicrafts. We all need to do something to keep cash coming in and bills paid. Very different to our retail sector. Another plus for our industry is the quarantine at the borders. It does cause many problems for those of us working to import seeds and plants but....

.... it has two major benefits. First is the obvious one of restricting the range of pests and diseases we have to deal with in our daily tasks. Can't deny that things like the Tomato Psyllid and Myrtle Rust have caused real problems when trying to move plants around the country. However it would be a lot worse if we had half the diseases and pest you find in Europe.

The second benefit is that it is not practical (in many cases possible) to import large boxes of unrooted cuttings from third world countries. If it was possible then we would all end up in a race to be the cheapest. In many parts of Europe they import most of their cutting materials from central America and parts of Eastern Africa. The cost less than a cent each and the nurseries do thousands. To be competitive they then have to have some of the most amazing potting and logistics equipment. Capital expensive and more like a factory than a nursery.

They end up with high capital nurseries that have very small margins and they exist by producing large volumes of a small number of cultivars. They have a huge customer base consisting of the whole of Europe and even parts of Asia and Middle east. Well in excess of 700 million people living in a small range of climatic zones. Here we have a population of 26 million living in a full range from deep tropics to cold temperate. For most of the plants we produce the target market would be around 15 million. This makes it hard for us to produce large numbers of any particular cultivar. As a guess the most popular ornamental tree/shrub/grass would only sell 2 million. The most popular plant sold in Europe would be in tens of millions. Much more room for automation.

Sometimes we feel it is all too much but horticulture in Australia is fairly robust with constant demand and generally easy growing conditions. We know that owning a nursery (propagation, production or retail) will not makes us rich but we can usually produce a good income to raise a family. We employ over 25,000 people who generally enjoy their job and many enjoy coming to work. We know that everyday we are actually producing something good for the world. We give our customers something they want and need that makes their lives better. Lots of little oxygen machines.

As we move into winter lets all be positive and see what is good about working in a nursery. Doesn't matter if it is big or small it is rewarding and interesting. It is May now, next month is June which includes the shortest day. Once that is past the plants start to change their growth stages and the next thing we know it is Grand Final time, then Cup Day and finally Santa is on his way.

It is good to be alive, working with living things that benefit the planet.

Clive Larkman

Do you want or need to import live plants?

If so, you may need to use a Post Entry Quarantine facility (PEQ)

- We have a PEQ facility with ability to handle the majority of plants
- Deflask tissue culture in PEQ or in regular nursery conditions
- Advise on packing and handling to minimise risk to plant health
- Assist in obtaining import permits
- Organise fumigation and insecticidal dips
- Will collect from airport
- Ship Australia wide once cleared PEQ (WA restrictions for new varieties may apply.)
- Pot on into larger pots post PEQ
- Bulk up stock post PEQ
- 30 years experience in plant importation
- 35 years experience in plant growing
- Handle one plant to several thousand.
- Fully licensed with Biosecurity and Borel Control
